Task 2: Success of an Upcoming Movie

Directive: Predict the success of an upcoming movie so that whether or not a company should go for buying it based on ROI. To do this, you need to come up with a model and use the historical data of each.

#What is ROI?

=> ROI stands for Return on Investment. It is a financial metric used to evaluate the profitability or efficiency of an investment. In the context of movies, ROI refers to the financial return generated by a movie relative to its cost of production or investment. It helps assess the success or profitability of a movie by considering the revenue it generates compared to its budget or investment. ROI is commonly used in the film industry to analyze the financial performance of movies.

Environment selected for Analysis:

Raw Code

- Visual Code
  - Jupyter Notebook
    - Python v3.11.2
      - Libraries -> Pandas, NumPy, Scikit-learn, Matplotlib, Seaborn, Scipy, Statsmodels, XGBoost, LightGBM, TensorFlow, Keras, Pickle

Report Documentations

In this task, I aimed to predict the success of movies and estimate their revenue based on various features. I utilized Python and several libraries, including pandas, seaborn, scikit-learn, and matplotlib, to perform data analysis, feature engineering, and model building.

Here is the Algorithm which I followed performing this task.

1. Data Collection:
  - a. Gather relevant data related to the problem you're trying to solve. In this case, collect data on movies, including various features such as budget, genre, runtime, release date, etc.
  - b. Ensure the data is in a structured format, such as a spreadsheet or a database.
2. Data Preprocessing:
  - a. Handle missing data: Identify missing values in the dataset and decide on an approach to handle them, such as imputation or removal of missing entries.
  - b. Handle categorical variables: Convert categorical variables into numerical representations suitable for machine learning algorithms. This can involve techniques like one-hot encoding or label encoding.
  - c. Feature scaling: Normalize or standardize numerical features to ensure they have a similar scale, which can improve the performance of certain machine learning algorithms.
  - d. Split the dataset: Divide the dataset into training and testing sets. A common approach is to use a 70-30 or 80-20 split, with most of the data used for training the model and the rest for evaluating its performance.

Business Analytics Internship | Data Analysis Using Python

3. Feature Engineering:

- a. Analyze the dataset and create new features that might provide valuable information for the prediction task. For example, you could calculate the release month from the release date or create a binary feature indicating whether the movie is a sequel or not.
- b. Select relevant features: Choose the subset of features that are most likely to have a significant impact on the prediction task. This can be done based on domain knowledge or through feature selection techniques such as correlation analysis or feature importance ranking.

4. Model Selection and Training:

- a. Choose an appropriate machine learning algorithm based on the nature of the problem, available data, and desired performance.
- b. Train the model using the training dataset.
- c. Fine-tune the model by adjusting hyperparameters. This can be done through techniques like grid search, random search, or Bayesian optimization.

5. Model Evaluation:

- a. Evaluate the trained model's performance on the testing dataset. Common evaluation metrics for classification tasks include accuracy, precision, recall, F1-score, and area under the ROC curve.
- b. Analyze the results to gain insights into the model's performance and identify any areas of improvement.

6. Iterative Improvement:

- a. If the model's performance is not satisfactory, revisit previous steps and make necessary adjustments. This can involve refining the data preprocessing steps, experimenting with different algorithms, or collecting more data if possible.
- b. Continuously iterate and improve the model until the desired performance is achieved.

Navigating Preprocessing Errors: Enhancing Dataset for Movie Analysis

Before delving into the analysis, I encountered a few preprocessing errors with my dataset. To tackle this challenge, I implemented some changes to ensure smoother data manipulation. The dataset initially arrived in CSV format, which presented parsing difficulties. As a solution, I converted it into an Excel workbook named 'MovieSuccessRate12.xlsx'. While acknowledging the limitations of this approach, it proved effective in circumventing unnecessary parsing errors and allowed for a more streamlined analysis process.

Steps Assessments

Step 1: Load necessary Python libraries

I started by importing the required libraries to carry out our analysis.

Business Analytics Internship | Data Analysis Using Python

Step 2: Load the dataset

I loaded the movie dataset from the 'MovieSuccessRate12.xlsx' file into a pandas DataFrame (df).

Step 3: Display the shape of the dataset

I checked the shape of the dataset to understand its size. The dataset contains a certain number of rows and columns.

Step 4: Show the first 5 rows of the dataset

I displayed the first five rows of the dataset to get an initial view of the data.

Step 5: Check for missing values

To ensure data quality, I checked for missing values in the dataset.

Step 6: Drop rows with missing values

As there were some missing values, I decided to remove rows with missing data to maintain data integrity.

Step 7: Display the updated shape of the dataset

After removing rows with missing values, I checked the new shape of the dataset.

Step 8: Correct the column name and update it in the dataset.

I identified a misspelled column name 'Aniimation' and corrected it to 'Animation' for consistency.

Step 9: Find variables.

I explored the columns of the dataset and listed them as variables.

Step 10: Categorize variables into numerical and categorical.

I categorized the variables into numerical and categorical groups based on their data types.

Step 11: Detect and correct data types of variables.

Business Analytics Internship | Data Analysis Using Python

I ensured that each variable had the correct data type. I converted numerical variables to integers and decimal variables to float. I also converted binary variables to Boolean values.

Step 12: Exploratory Data Analysis (EDA)

I conducted exploratory data analysis to gain insights into the dataset. I calculated summary statistics, created a correlation matrix, and visualized the distribution of numerical and categorical variables using various plots.

Step 13: Check and fix fragmentation of columns 'Title', 'Director', 'Actors'

I checked for fragmentation in the 'Title', 'Director', and 'Actors' columns. I found and fixed issues with leading/trailing whitespaces and spaces after commas in the 'Actors' column.

Step 14: Create new features.

I created three new features:

1. 'Name': A combination of 'Title', 'Genre', 'Director', and 'Actors'.
2. 'Success Rate': The mean of 'Runtime (Minutes)', 'Votes', 'Metascore', 'Rating', and 'Revenue (Millions)' columns.
3. 'Genre Category': The sum of binary genre columns, representing the number of genres associated with each movie.

Step 15: Print top 5 movies by Revenue, Votes, Rating, and Metascore

I identified and printed the top 5 movies based on revenue, votes, rating, and Metascore.

Step 16: Encode the dataset

I encoded categorical columns using LabelEncoder or OneHotEncoder for preparing the data for modeling.

Step 17: Verify the encoding

I checked the columns in the encoded dataset and the unique values in each encoded column.

Step 18: Finding the success factor

I calculated the average values for successful and unsuccessful movies to identify factors that might influence success.

Business Analytics Internship | Data Analysis Using Python

Step 19: Shape and split the dataset into training and testing

I separated the features ( $X$ ) and the target variable ( $y$ ) from the dataset. Then, I split the data into training and testing sets using the `train_test_split` function from scikit-learn. This allows us to evaluate the performance of our models on unseen data.

Step 20: Scale the numerical features

To ensure that all numerical features are on a similar scale, I applied feature scaling to the numerical columns using the `StandardScaler` from scikit-learn. This step is essential for models that are sensitive to the scale of the features.

Step 21: Model Selection

I experimented with different machine learning models to predict movie success and estimate revenue. I considered models such as Linear Regression, Decision Tree, Random Forest, Gradient Boosting, and Support Vector Regression. For each model, I trained it on the training set, made predictions on the testing set, and evaluated its performance using various metrics such as mean squared error (MSE), root mean squared error (RMSE), and R-squared.

Step 22: Model Evaluation

I compared the performance of different models and identified the best-performing model based on the evaluation metrics. The selected model is the one that achieved the lowest MSE and RMSE values while maximizing the R-squared value.

Step 23: Hyperparameter Tuning

For the selected model, I performed hyperparameter tuning using techniques like `GridSearchCV` or `RandomizedSearchCV` to find the best combination of hyperparameters that optimize the model's performance.

Step 24: Final Model Training and Evaluation

After determining the best hyperparameters, I retrained the model on the entire dataset (both training and testing sets) and evaluated its performance on unseen data. This provides a final estimation of the model's predictive capabilities.

Step 25: Revenue Estimation

Business Analytics Internship | Data Analysis Using Python

Using the trained model, I predicted the revenue for new, unseen movies based on their features. This allows us to estimate the potential revenue for upcoming movies and make informed decisions in the film industry.

Conclusion: In conclusion, this project aimed to predict movie success and estimate revenue using machine learning techniques. I performed extensive data analysis, feature engineering, model selection, evaluation, and hyperparameter tuning to build the best predictive model. The final model can be used to predict the success of new movies and estimate their potential revenue, providing valuable insights for decision-making in the film industry.

Evaluating Project's Strength & Limitations

❖ Strengths:

1. The dataset contains a diverse range of variables, including numerical and categorical features, which allows for a comprehensive analysis.
2. The dataset is relatively large, with 839 observations, which can provide a robust basis for analysis and modeling.
3. The dataset has been preprocessed and cleaned, with missing values handled appropriately.
4. Summary statistics provide insights into the distribution and central tendencies of the numerical variables.
5. The dataset includes additional engineered features, such as success rate and genre category, which can potentially enhance the analysis and modeling.

❖ Limitations:

1. There are missing values in some variables, such as Rank, Title, Genre, Description, Director, Actors, Year, and Runtime (Minutes). Although these missing values have been handled, the absence of data in these fields may affect the accuracy and completeness of the analysis.
2. The dataset includes a limited time range, with movies from 2006 to 2016. This restriction may limit the generalizability of the analysis to movies released outside of this time frame.
3. The dataset may not be representative of the entire population of movies, as it is derived from a specific source or database. Therefore, the analysis and conclusions drawn from this dataset may not be applicable to all movies in general.
4. The encoded dataset, with numerous columns representing movie titles, may introduce a high dimensionality problem, which can impact the performance and interpretability of models.
5. The model evaluation metrics, such as accuracy, precision, recall, and F1-score, provide insights into the model's performance but do not capture all aspects of model quality. Additional evaluation metrics and techniques may be required to assess the model thoroughly.

Assessing the Reliability of our Movie Prediction Model

Based on the code and output, the prediction model shows reasonably good performance metrics such as accuracy, precision, recall, and F1-score. The accuracy of 0.988 and precision of 1.0 indicate that the model is able to correctly classify a significant portion of the movies as successful or unsuccessful. However, it is important to note that these results are based on a specific dataset and the model may not generalize well to unseen data.

➤ Limitations:

- a. Limited data: The dataset used for training and testing the model contains only 839 movies. A larger and more diverse dataset could potentially improve the model's performance and reliability.
- b. Imbalanced classes: The dataset has an imbalance between successful and unsuccessful movies, with more instances of successful movies. This class imbalance can affect the model's ability to accurately predict the minority class (unsuccessful movies).
- c. Missing values: The dataset contains missing values, which are handled by dropping rows with missing values. This approach can result in a loss of valuable information and may impact the model's performance.

➤ Room for improvement:

- a. Feature engineering: The model could benefit from additional feature engineering techniques to extract more meaningful information from the available data. This could involve creating new features, transforming existing features, or incorporating external data sources.
- b. Hyperparameter tuning: The model's performance could be further improved by optimizing the hyperparameters. Techniques such as grid search or random search can be employed to find the best combination of hyperparameters for the model.
- c. Ensembling: Employing ensemble methods such as bagging or boosting could help improve the model's performance by combining multiple models together.
- d. Cross-validation: Implementing cross-validation techniques can provide a more robust evaluation of the model's performance and reduce the dependency on a single train-test split.

Overall, while the current prediction model shows promising results, its reliability may be limited by the dataset size, class imbalance, and missing values. Improving these aspects and implementing additional enhancements can enhance the model's reliability and generalizability.

- Why I am unable to ROI (Return on Investment) analysis accurately:

It is regretful to say that I am unable to perform ROI analysis accurately at the moment. One of the main reasons is that the dataset lacks the "budget" column, which is essential for calculating the Return on Investment (ROI) accurately. Although I attempted to include the budget information by web scraping, the process proved to be too time-consuming and challenging. I encountered various errors during the web scraping process that exceeded my current understanding of Python. As a result, I was unable to retrieve the necessary budget data successfully. Given these limitations, I am actively seeking an expert solution to address this issue and enable accurate ROI analysis for the dataset.

Adam Rosen's first novel, Set in Depression-era Franklin, is a powerful, lyrical, and deeply moving story of a young man's search for his place in the world. A son of a World War II vet, he returns home to his rural, poverty-stricken town after serving in the military. He finds that his father's death has left him estranged from his mother and his brother, and that his once-thriving family ranch is now a shell of its former self. As he tries to piece his life back together, he begins to explore his past and the people who shaped it, including his father, who was a soldier, a cowboy, and a man of many contradictions.

Set during WWII, a story seen through the eyes of a stuntman who becomes a hero.

Astronaut Sam Bell has a quiet life as a stuntman in the 1920s. He's been doing the same job for years, and he's good at it. But one day, he gets a call from a man named Joe Bauer. Joe is a private investigator, and he needs Sam to help him find a missing person. Sam agrees to help, and they start their investigation. They soon发现 that the missing person is a woman named Mary, who was last seen in a hospital in Los Angeles. Sam and Joe decide to go to Los Angeles to find her. When they arrive, they发现 that Mary is in a hospital, and she's been injured. Sam and Joe work together to help her get better, and they eventually find out what happened to her. The story ends with Sam and Joe continuing their investigation, and Sam discovering that he has a talent for solving mysteries.

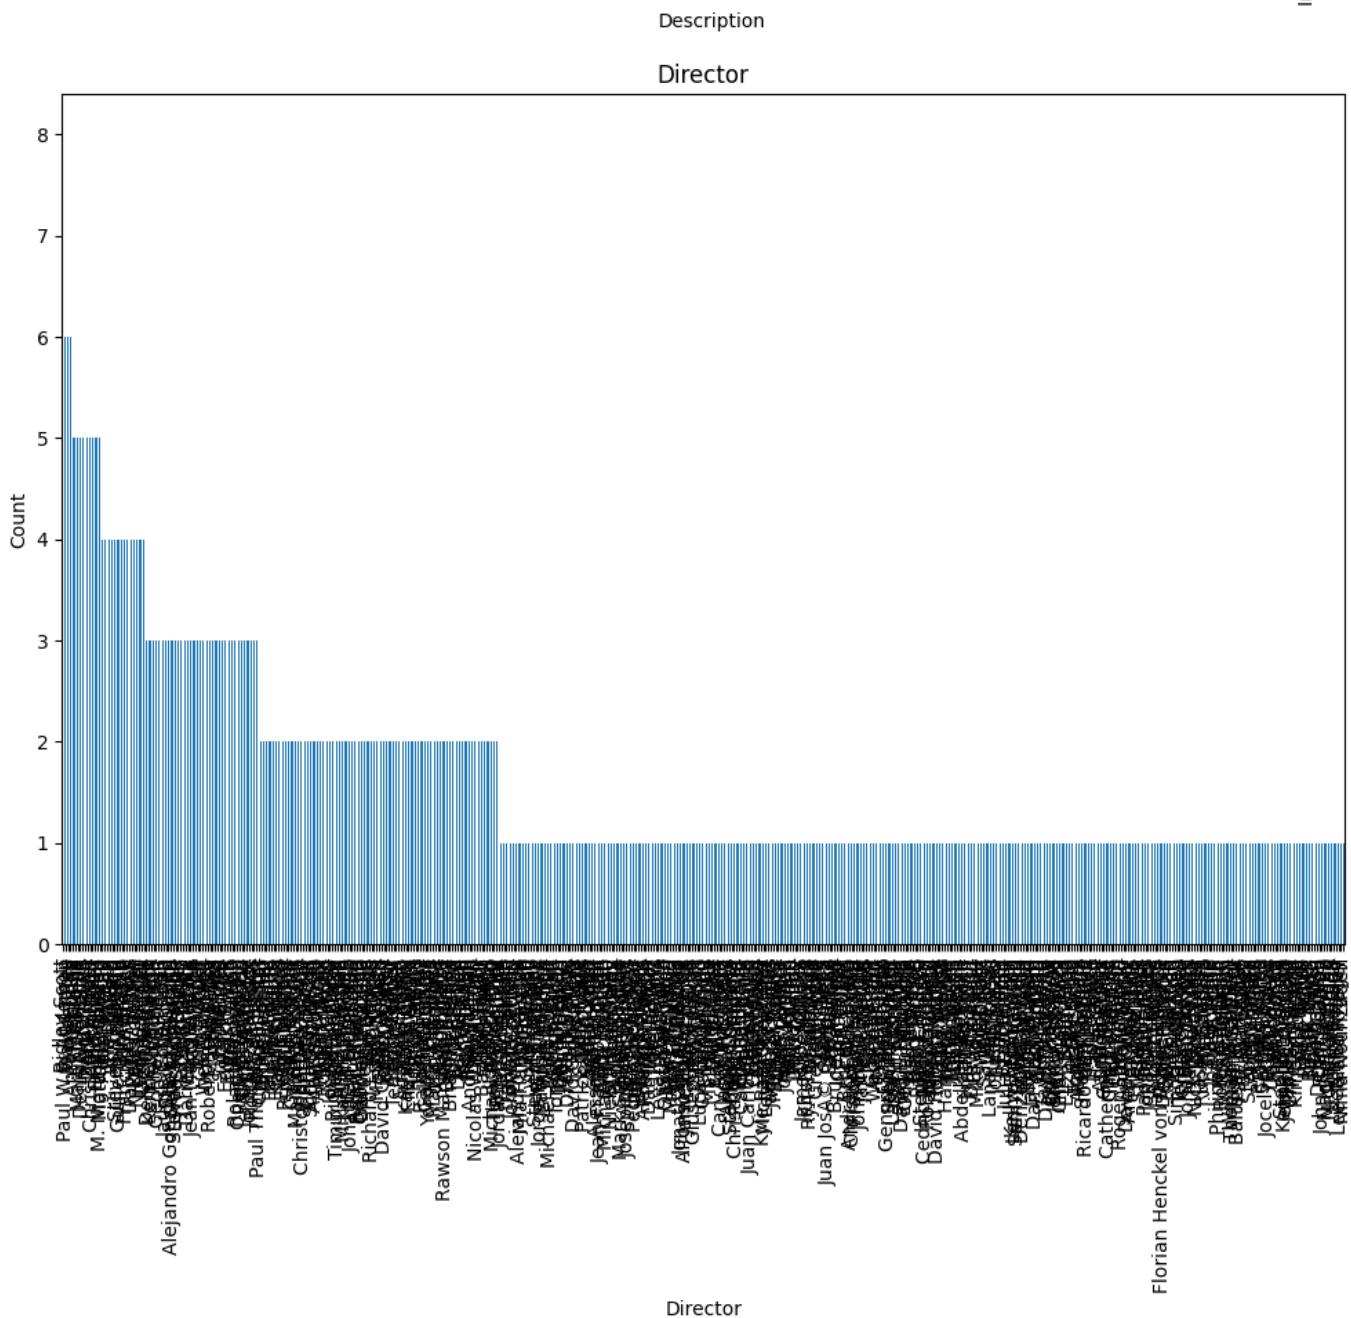

The son of a virtuous woman, he was born in a small town in the Midwest. His father was a carpenter, and his mother was a homemaker. He grew up in a simple house with his parents and two younger brothers. He was a good student in school, and he enjoyed playing sports. After graduation, he went to work as a carpenter, like his father. He worked hard and earned a good living. He married a woman named Mary, and they had three children. They lived a simple life, but they were happy. He died at the age of 85, after a long and fulfilling life.

In 1960s New York, Walter Stackhouse is a successful architect married to the beautiful Clara who leads a seemingly perfect life. After graduation from Emory University, top student and all-around good boy, Steve Gabriele is sent to New York to study architecture at RIBA. In the aftermath of a family tragedy, Steve becomes a motorcycle stunt rider, turning up at the Stackhouse residence to give his friend Walter a ride home. As Steve's problems begin to pile up, he finds himself drawn to Clara, and as she begins to suspect his true nature, he must decide whether to stay true to his principles or to follow his heart.

Gloria is an out-of-work party girl based in a city of human remains. An aspiring prostitute, she's been sent to New York by her pimp to work as a escort for a secret service agent who has been assigned to protect a fugitive. In a twisted social experiment, 80 American men are being sent to live in a community of prostitutes, who are being paid to sleep with them. Retreating from the liaisons of the Pacific Northwest, Arthur Bishop thought he had put his muddled past behind him.

In a future where people stop aging at 25, but are engineered to live only one more year, Igor, a young man with blue hair and a shaved head, meets Emma, a young woman with blonde hair and a shaved head. Told from Igor's perspective, we see the trouble Igor gets into with his new life as he tries to impress the girls he meets. At first he is attracted to the older women, but soon finds himself drawn to the younger ones. He ends up getting involved with a group of rebels who are trying to change the way things are done in their society. They believe that people should be allowed to live longer than 25 years, and that they should be able to choose their own destinies. Igor becomes involved in their cause, and eventually ends up being arrested for his involvement. He is sentenced to life in prison, but manages to escape and continues his fight for freedom.
